

CLOTHING

The right travel accessories are about three things—simplicity, versatility and style. Experienced travelers know that the less you bring, the better—so it's great to have clothing that does double duty, like a pashmina scarf that can double as a blanket on chilly flights or train rides. The Pashmina Store makes great big, cozy unisex scarves in dozens of colors and patterns ($24.99-$129, www.thepashminastore.com). For the ultimate in luxury scarves, however, designer Roberto Cavalli's fall/winter line features fun, sophisticated animal print pashminas ($960, www.bergdorfgoodman.com or www.robortocavalli.com). And, of course, never travel without a little black dress in a wrinkle-free fabric. This brilliant, versatile piece of clothing can be dressed up with heels and diamonds or dressed down with a sun hat and sandals; Diane Von Furstenberg—who invented the wrap dress—makes great travel dresses that won't wrinkle and can be worn a variety of ways. We love her fun, flirty Taurus Wrap Dress ($345, www.dianevonfurstenberg.com). The men's version of the "little black dress" is that perfect dark suit...and you can never go wrong with Armani (www.armani.com). Sure, clothing is key, but no true jetsetter's wardrobe is complete without a glamorous pair of oversized designer glasses—nothing hides a pair of jet-lagged eyes like a pair of fabulous, mother-of-pearl Chanel Jackie-O shades ($350-$2,450, www.chanel.com). For men, try any shades by John Varvatos; he has a ton of shapes to frame your face, and his edgy signature style is sure to glam up any travel attire (www.johnvarvatos.com).

Since you're on your feet a lot while traveling, the shoes you choose to wear should be comfortable—without sacrificing style. Keep in mind, security check points while picking out your footwear—the best shoes will slip right off your feet for security checks. Ladies, ballet flats are a great option—try the pretty ones from London Sole. It doesn't hurt that they're so tiny, they'll take up virtually no space in your luggage; they also come in every conceivable color and style...you'll want to pirouette around the departures terminal! ($150 and up, www.londonsole.com). For the men reading this, when it comes to footwear, you simply can't get any better than Bruno Magli (www.brunomagli.it). His collections are versatile, elegant and absolutely gorgeous...with a pair of Bruno Magli's, you'll be the envy of everyone at the security check point!

Want to really love traveling? Try some serious cashmere. Cashmere socks are a necessity for anyone who hopes to get cozy on a tedious flight and/or train ride. We love the colors of Neiman Marcus' Italian cashmere socks ($44 per pair, www.niemanmarcus.com)...we promise you'll use them for years to come. And, for the ultimate in luxury, protect your peepers with a cashmere eye mask for sleeping ($275 for a set of mask and slippers, www.niemanmarcus.com). The Pashmina Store even makes impossibly soft cashmere blankets in an assortment of colors that fold up nicely into your carry-on ($399, www.thepashminastore.com). Pack it all in our favorite designer bag of the season—Cole Haan's Hobo Bag from this winter's Paige collection, which is subtle and sophisticated—and clearly a designer piece without being flashy (www.colehaan.com). Bruno Magli's travel bag is as versatile as it is classy... you'll want to use this bag for more than just your weekend business trips.
